

Reason and Feeling

"Reason is, and ought only to, the slave of the passions," says David Hume (1711-1776) and continues, "man can never pretend to any other office than to serve and obey them." The statement expresses that man's inner is "the rider on the horse." Also Freud was also close to this truth when he said that the "id" precedes and energizes the "ego". Already Plato asserted the superiority of soul over body.

Intuition wells up from the depth of the human nature. It is an affair of the heart, not a rational act.
